

ITCHING ECZEMA. IS DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Use like cold cream to subdue irritation and clear the skin.

Any breaking out or irritation on the face, arms, legs and body when accompanied by itching, or when the skin is dry and feverish, can be readily overcome by applying a little bold-sulphur, says a noted dermatologist.

He informs us that bold-sulphur instantly allays the angry itching and irritation and soothes and heals the Eczema right up leaving the skin clear and smooth. Bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position for many years in the treatment of cutaneous disorders because of its parasite-destroying property. Nothing has ever been found to take its place in treating the irritable and inflammatory skin affections. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to subdue the itching irritation and drive the Eczema away and it is often years later before any eruption again appears.

Those troubled should obtain from any drugist an ounce of bold-sulphur, which is applied to the affected parts in the same manner as an ordinary cold cream. It isn't unpleasant, and the prompt relief afforded, particularly in itching Eczema, proves very welcome.

TAKE SALTS FOR THE KIDNEYS IF YOUR BACK HURTS

We Should Drink Lots of Water and Eat Less Meat, Says
Noted Authority on Kidney Disorders

Recommends a Spoonful of Jad Salts In Glass of Water Before Breakfast to Stimulate Kidneys and Eliminate the Uric Acid

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy, the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before

FIRE IN THE NORTH - ANDERSON GROCERY

Entire Stock Practically Ruined by Heat and Water—Damage Not Estimated.

First last night about 9 o'clock broke out in the North Anderson Grocery company's store building occupied by Paul Martin and nearly the entire stock of goods was either destroyed or greatly damaged by the steam and water.

The fire was first discovered by a negro who went to a house nearby and gave the alarm. From the appearance it looked as if the fire started in the office in the rear of the room and when the firemen reached it, the flames had made great headway. They soon had streams of water playing on it but the stock was badly damaged by the heat and water. If it had not been for the efforts of the fire department the other side of the building which is occupied by Mr. Cromer, would have been burned also.

It was impossible last night to estimate the damage. Mr. Martin stated that he carried insurance but feared the policy had expired.

Better be safe than sorry—Willett P. Sloan, Insurance.

BIG CLUSTERS PEACHES

Garvin Township Planter Exhibits Some Tempting Fruit.

Mr. W. L. Copeland, a prosperous planter of Garvin township, was in the city yesterday and exhibited some of the finest peaches that have been seen in this section in some time. The peaches grow in large clusters, seven large ones being attached to a twig seven or eight inches long, while five other large peaches were attached to a twig about five inches long. The peaches were of the Robert E. Lee variety. While those growing in clusters were fine, those growing singly were particularly so.

GERMANS BUILDING ROADS IN TURKEY

Correspondent Finds Many German Officers in Ottoman Empire.

Constantinople, July 15.—On the road to Entally, three kilometers east of one of the dirtiest little towns in Anatolia, in a group of drafted Armenians engaged in road-building. The Associated Press correspondent found a young German engineer, clad in the uniform of a Turkish police officer.

"Yes," replied the young German to the question put to him, "I am building this road. Here is a place where there have been many washouts. I am revetting the embankment and hope that the road will stay for a while after that. It's a dreary life, of course. But it has to be done. I'd rather be in the firing line in Flanders, or any old place, for that matter. But nowadays we will have to help where best we can."

That the road was needed, and that it was best to keep it in good repair was shown a little later, when a regiment of Turkish artillery went over it at a lively clip.

At the foot of the Amanus Pass there was another German engineer doing similar work.

"I am taking the kinks out of the road," he replied. "You see, these old ramps up the mountain have been used from time immemorial. I suppose some donkey first discovered that as being one way of getting over the hill. I mean four-footed donkey, in the days of Nebuchadnezzar. Since then all the armies of antiquity and a few modern ones have used the road without knowing that the hill can be ascended in an easier way."

Then he showed the correspondent a new survey he had made. The old road took eight turns to get over the pass, and it reduces the possibility of accidents. A cut or two, a little retreating, and the trick was done.

At Ishlahah the correspondent met a German medical officer. The man had formerly been in the employ of the Baghdad Railroad. When the war came he entered the service of the Ottoman army, because physicians and surgeons were needed. He was put in command of the sanitary troops of Syria.

"They have had some typhoid fever and typhus around here," he explained. "I am trying to get rid of both. Making fair progress. Getting place cleaned up. Most places now safe. Nothing to fear."

The man talked as if he had to turn in a certified voucher for every word uttered in the course of a day. He was serious. It is doubtful whether he had ever smiled in his life.

In Aleppo another German officer was met. He too had his niche in the Ottoman army affairs. He is looked upon as somewhat of an expert in base and line of communication matters; but, to judge by his appearance, one could swear that he had just stepped out of the best drawing-room in Berlin. He said he was doing his best. The Turkish base commander said he was doing wonders. He had just managed to find several tons of railroad spikes where nobody suspected them—in a clothing store belonging to an Armenian.

"How they got there, I don't know. He mused reflectively in the casino. "Got some water piping in the same place."

Everywhere the correspondent found the German officer, almost always singlehanded, and always in charge of some department of war and military affairs that must not go wrong.

In Adna two German officers were training the troops of the vilayet of that name. Other German officers were met here and there. They were all doing the same thing to a different tune—preparing Turkey for the war, or putting the finishing touches on work already done.

No data on the number of German officers and non-commissioned men in the Ottoman army are available. But it is certain that their influence in the Ottoman army is great. Many observations induce the Associated Press correspondent to say that the Turk makes an apt pupil in military matters. He loses nothing better than to feel that he is a smart soldier.

This is weak side which the German officer appeals to with good results. The point upon which the Germans have concentrated their greatest energy is the Dardanelles, with the Gallipoli Peninsula. Since last November have German officers and non-commissioned men been busy here. The various batteries have been improved by them, new ones emplaced, and Turkish artillerymen have been given such additional training as was needed. The story of German endeavor in those parts, when ultimately it may be told, will make a most interesting chapter in the history of the present war.

Do Not Frown on all Frivolities.

In the August Woman's Home Companion, Grace Margaret Gould, fashion editor of that publication, devotes a page to "Little Dress Vanities." These little vanities she advocates in modified form, but she is emphatically opposed to extremes. Following is an extract from what she has to say on this subject:

"Don't scorn the little frivolities of dress. They of ten give the soft, feminine note to a costume, and really its charm. 'Stiff, severe effects in dress many times proclaim a character narrow and over-prim. The lovable woman just naturally wants to prink a bit and make herself look her very prettiest.'"

When cooking apples do not forget to put a pinch of salt with them; then they will be more tender.
